

Brian McDonald
Managing Director, Houlihan Lokey

Brian McDonald is a Managing Director in Houlihan Lokey's New York office, where he works in the firm's Mergers & Acquisitions Group. He has advised publicly traded and privately held companies in several industries, including general industrial and manufacturing, aerospace and defense, telecommunications, food & beverage, retail, consumer products, and paper and forest products.

Mr. McDonald's recent transactions include advising Genesys Conferencing in its sale to West Corporation, advising Siemens Corporation in the sale of its hydrocarbon services business to Fomento de Construcciones y Contratas, advising Atlas Aerospace and Vitron Manufacturing in their sale to Graham Partners, advising HeatMax in its sale to Kobayashi Pharmaceutical Co., and advising Verizon in the divestiture of its MCI Department of Corrections line of business.

Before joining Houlihan Lokey, Mr. McDonald was a vice president in the mergers and acquisitions group at Goldman Sachs.

Mr. McDonald received an A.B. magna cum laude from Georgetown University, an M.A. with distinction from the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies at Johns Hopkins University and an M.B.A. from INSEAD.